The Remington 105Cti design is still a fledgling, but is destined to be an American classic autoloader. Once some minor function issues are worked out, this becomes a Buy It recommendation.

The Beretta 391 Urika Optima showed wood-to-metal fit that was virtually flawless. The cross-bolt safety was easily accessible at the front of the trigger guard.

The trigger was crisp and smooth at a consistent 6+ pounds, which we saw as a tad heavy for a target gun that is consistently shot from a mounted position.
