Above: Engraving on the receiver featured pheasants on the left side and ducks on the right. The slide release located just rear of the trigger was easy to operate.

Right: The magazine cutoff switch rotated left and right to allow rounds to be pulled from the magazine or fed manually one at a time.

The bottom of the fore end (arrow) was relieved to clear the ejection port. It also played a part in reducing length of pull and served to enhance leverage when working the slide.
