

WALTHER PK380 W/LASER WAP40010 380 ACP, $489
GUN TESTS GRADE: B

The PK380 was pleasant to fire because of the fuller grip, but the trade-off was less concealability. The red indicator lights on the laser were a feature testers appreciated, especially in bright light conditions. The laser's activation switch was a bit awkward to manipulate, our testers said.

The Walther's laser easily removed and reattached from the pistol's accessory rail without the use of tools. The PK380's laser sight was flush with the muzzle of the pistol, giving it a finished look.

It was a stretch and a bit awkward for an average-size right-handed shooter's trigger finger to reach and manipulate the activation switch on the Walther.

LEDs on either side of the laser illuminate, indicating that the laser is on.
