

SPRINGFIELD ARMORY XD9 SERVICE XD9201HCSP06 9MM, $543

GUN TESTS GRADE: A-

Color enhancement can only add to this proven workhorse that is also a very easy gun to shoot. The Olive Drab receiver was the only variation we could find compared to the standard black-on-black Four-inch Service model. Compared to the modular construction of the P250, the action and support rails of the XD were fixed on and supported directly by the polymer frame.

Side by side it could be difficult to tell one barrel from another. Top to bottom are the Sig Sauer P250, Springfield Armory XD, and CZ USA P-07 barrels. All three shared lock-up points and a ramp leading to the chamber. The XD's chamber was supported by a Sig Sauer-style locking block. After initial lubrication, all three guns ran without malfunction despite getting very dirty.

Our XD came with three value-added components in a lockable airline-quality hard case. On the left is a double-magazine pouch with Picatinny rails. We used ours to carry the compact 90-lumen Streamlight TLR3. The belt-slide holster also carried an integrated rail. Both units were tension adjustable. Right is a magazine loading tool.
